CANADIAN EXPERTISE IN RURAL DEVELOPMENT: PART II.

Introduction

This section is composed of two computer studies. The first is a review of all dissertations registered with the University Microfilms International of Ann Arbor Michigan written in Canadian institutions in the following subject areas: economic development, rural development, agriculture, and resource sector development; fisheries, forestry, and minerals. A package of 769 titles was produced and from this 102 theses were found to intersect these subject areas with the social sciences.

Each title is denoted by a listing number and is displayed in the following format:
1. Institution,
2. Author and Year,
3. Country of study,
4. Subject area, and
5. Page reference to print out.

While all recent theses were included, there were three interesting historical items which could not be discarded: A.J. Madill's thesis of 1930 from the University of Toronto, "A History of Agricultural Education in Ontario;" Thomas W. Grindley's 1929 University of Minnesota thesis, "Economic Aspects of Single-Cropping Systems in Western Canada;" and, "A Study of the Production of Horses and the Comparative Utilisation of Animal and Mechanical Power," by Howard B. Sommerfeld, University of Minnesota, 1932. These three dissertations both reflect and contrast with issues current in the development of LDC agricultural sectors.

A second similar study was made of the Social Science Citation Index for authors giving Canadian institutional addresses. Some 113 references were selected from a total of 499 items. The format is similar, showing under each reference number:
1. Institutional affiliation,
2. Author
3. Country of study,
4. Subject / field, and
5. Page reference to print-out.

The information has been organised into four listings; by institution and by subject area for the S.S.C.I. and the dissertations. The reader may make preliminary quantitative and qualitative comparisons of the universities on the basis of this information.

It should be born in mind, however, that the information contained in these print-outs is of good calibre but not totally inclusive. Not all Canadian universities subscribe to the dissertation listing service of U.M.I. The University of Alberta is not listed as a participating institution yet many references were found. Thus the reader should be aware that there may be some variability in coverage when making comparisons. Cross checking with lists sent by those universities that did provide them (see appendicies in Part I) does, nevertheless, show a good degree of coverage.

The product of these searches showed the following general characteristics: for the S.S.C.I. topics in political economy, general or macro-economics, and other large scale perspectives accounted for 48 per cent of the listings. Topics on the mineral sector accounted for 3 per cent; fisheries 9 per cent, forestry 4 per cent, and agriculture was the second largest with 36 per cent. The dissertations were quite similar: general topics: 47 per cent, forestry zero, fisheries 11 per cent, mineral sector 4 per cent, and agriculture 37 per cent.

This résumé provides only a brief sketch of the contents; a good deal of interesting material is in the substance of the following pages.
