1 RESEARCH FOR WATER  53:00 minutes
The need for the vital resource of water is exploding due to population growth and increased agricultural demands. This is especially true in developing countries where access to water is decreasing. Poor management, galloping urbanization, ill-advised policies and pollution worsen a situation that is already detrimental to public health.

2 A VOICE FOR WOMEN  53:00 minutes
In this episode, it is through the efforts of researchers and scientists in Senegal, Morocco and Palestine that we see how training, research and experience help women manage and maximize natural resources to improve their living conditions.

3 THE POLITICS OF EXCLUSION  53:00 minutes
The problems of poverty and exclusion are a reflection of inequalities. We often speak of social justice, something that cannot exist without satisfying the basic needs of individuals. What social policies are in place to fight these inequalities? Is there a real political will to combat the injustices?

4 HEALTH FOR LIFE  53:20 minutes
Despite the progress toward the control and elimination of malaria, thanks to prevention policies and the increased availability of pharmaceutical drugs, this episode shows that we are far from its eradication in developing nations.

5 BETWEEN CITIZENS :-( :)  52:05 minutes
The sharing of information and communication techniques has contributed to sustainable development. The use of electronic messaging has improved the methods of work and living conditions in the often poor and isolated rural populations. Canadian support is helping with several of these projects, bringing communities together.

6 NEW PARADIGM  54:00 minutes
Experts and researchers in China, Brazil and India, share with us their personal reflections about the future development of emerging countries. Their economic wealth could soon surpass those of the richest countries and their rapid growth rates are upsetting the social, political and economic power structure.
